Two missing girls being sought here

Police are searching for two Granite City girls, missing since Saturday night.

Kip Pomeroy of the Granite City Police Department said an extensive investigation is being conducted, and there is no evidence of foul play.

Jennifer L. Beck, 15, of the 2800 block of Pershing Boulevard and Christy A. Younger, 15, of Edwardsville Road have been missing since they left Younger's home to go to The Billiards Club, 1320 Cleveland Blvd., Beck's grandmother, Pauline Gibbier, said.

Beck called Gibbier at about 11 p.m. Saturday to say she was at the billiard hall and that she would be home in about 15 minutes. Gibbier, who is Beck's legal guardian, said.

But neither Beck nor Younger returned home.

The disappearance, both girls' homes have received telephone calls in which the caller says nothing, but remains on the line for a few minutes.

Kay Ellen Sigite, an aunt of Beck, said a girlfriend of Beck's had called to say Beck was OK in St. Louis, but not returning home. She said the girls have also been reported seen in Swansea.

"Police say other unconfirmed sightings have been reported. 'They're not in trouble. We love them. We just want them to come home,' Gibbier said.

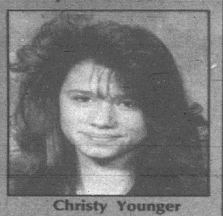

Beck is 5 feet 7 inches tall, weighs 115-120 pounds, and has blonde hair and blue eyes.

Younger is 5 feet 4 inches tall, weighs 105-115 pounds, has sandy blonde hair and brown eyes. She was wearing cut-off blue jeans and a white tank top when last seen.

Anyone with information should call the Granite City Police Department at 877-6111.

Two protest Walmsley's resignation

By Randy Vaughn
Staff writer

The resignation of Granite City Superintendent of Schools Gilbert "Gib" Walmsley Tuesday night but failed to receive unanimous support from the board.

Walmsley was hired April 7 to become superintendent of schools of the Moline School District effective July 1. His resignation from the Granite City School District is effective June 30.

The board approved the resignation by a vote of 4-2, with one abstaining.

The vote relieves Walmsley of his contract, which ran until June 1994, and pays him for 293 unused sick days throughout his 29 years of service in District 9. He later estimated the amount at $13,000.

Monroe Worthen voted against accepting the resignation, saying during the meeting, "I approve of paying someone what they have earned, but not someone who has breached a contract."

Board member Pete Novacich also voted against the approval. "I voted 'no' because we have two years left in a contract with him and he is leaving and breaking his contract," Novacich said Wednesday. (See WALMSLEY, Page 2A)

Murder trial ending

By Nicole Vaughn
Staff writer

Closing arguments are scheduled for today in the case of an Eagle Park Acres man charged with first-degree murder in the 1990 shooting death of his cousin.

Reuben Thornton Jr., 27, gave the final testimony in the case Wednesday.

Thornton testified that he shot his cousin, David Brandon, 22, to death Nov. 11, 1990, because "I feared for my life."

Brandon was found lying beside his truck, parked in the 1500 block of Second Street, Madison.

He suffered a single gunshot wound to the chest and was pronounced dead at the emergency room. (See TRIAL, Page 2A)

Photos of war dead sought

By Randy Vaughn
Staff writer

Photographs of 17 Quad City area men who died in World War II are being sought for albums which are displayed periodically.

Photos of the other 210 local war dead already have been collected by the Greater Granite City War Memorial committee, according to Steve Konkovich, chairman.

He is asking that friends or relatives of the 17 send a picture of each hero to him at 2802 Dogwood Drive in Granite City.

The photos of the war dead will go into 10 albums to be displayed in this area. In addition, Konkovich proposes a future billboard-type display that would be placed at the War Memorial in downtown Granite City on patriotic occasions.

The memorial is located in Memorial Park, 21st Street and Niedringhaus Avenue.

Photos are being sought of the following war dead:
Pvt. Delmore I. Hawkins was killed in France and his brother, Cpl. John I. Hawkins, was killed

Flags to honor area soldiers

Families can request that an American flag be flown in honor of their World War II dead at city ceremonies May 25 at the Greater Granite City War Memorial.

A Memorial Day program is scheduled at Memorial Park, 21st Street and Niedringhaus Avenue, on Monday, May 25, at 9 a.m. in tribute to the area's 227 service men and women who gave their lives during World War II, 1941-45.

At his family's request, the casket flag of Sgt. Henry Janek will be the first to be flown at the War Memorial that day. He was killed in action in Italy.

Other families planning to bring similar flags to be flown at the memorial can contact the Greater Granite City War Memorial chairman, Steve Konkovich, at 877-1336.

Hazards cited in Eticam plan

By Brian Henry
Correspondent

Strong opposition to a proposed hazardous-wastewater treatment plant in Granite City was voiced Tuesday night by some of about 130 people assembled at the Granite City Township Hall for a meeting sponsored by SPILL (Stop Polluting Illinois). Topics ranged from earthquake preparedness to possible legal actions.

None of the key city officials involved with the Eticam plant proposal were in attendance at the meeting to answer questions on ways to evacuate residents if the plant is built and an accident occurs.

Questions also were asked about the city's possible liability in the event of an accident, if the city works in conjunction with Eticam.

If the payments for such an accident exceeded city budget constraints, it was said at the meeting, taxpayers might have to bear the cost.

"The city has put itself and its taxpayers in a dangerous situation," said Kathy Andria, the leader of the citizen opposition group. "Eticam will pay certain fees, but it's quite possible the city won't be protected against other liabilities."

Two aldermen, Dan Brown and Ginny O'Beare, were on hand. Brown told the audience that the City Council did not know what it was getting into when it voted on Eticam in December 1989.

"I don't think anyone knew what we were voting for," Brown said. "We were led to believe that it was a facility which extracted silver and gold."

Mock disaster tests resources

By Randy Vaughn
Staff writer

Thirteen state and local emergency agencies responded Wednesday morning to a mock disaster at 21st and Quincy streets in Granite City.

The staged emergency involved toxic chemicals leaking from three barrels inside a Granite City Steel storage warehouse, leaving 11 victims with varying degrees of injury.

The four-hour exercise was the first unified exercise of its kind in Granite City. The operation was held to test Emergency Services and Disaster Agency communications; communication capabilities between different emergency agencies, departments and resources; and the city's emergency operation plan, ESDA Director Louise Wade said.

The activity met Federal Emergency Management Agency regulations requiring the Granite City ESDA to create a scenario once a year for training purposes, monitored by the state.

Fire Department officials used binoculars to identify the chemicals involved before approaching the scene, to avoid becoming victims themselves. Personnel dressed in the appropriate gear then administered simulated first aid to the victims.

"It was a learning experience for us as well," Granite City Steel plant protection manager Mar-

Scroggins to appeal license suspension

A former Madison County State's Attorney from Granite City who faces a two-year law practice suspension says he will appeal the decision to the Illinois Supreme Court.

The Review Board of the Illinois Attorney Registration and Disciplinary Commission last week upheld a previous recommendation by the Hearing Board of the ARDC to suspend Leon G. Scroggins Sr. from the practice of law for a two-year period, and that he then be required to petition the state Supreme Court before he can be reinstated.

The ARDC considers charges filed against lawyers and makes recommendations for disciplinary action to the Supreme Court. If the charges are upheld, actions can range from a reprimand to disbarment.

Scroggins, 60, was seeking to have the Hearing Board decision reversed, and had recommended a reprimand as a more appropriate punishment than suspension.

Scroggins said Wednesday he will appeal the decision to the high court. "I anticipate I will be exonerated," he said. "I don't know why (the Review Board) took seven months (to uphold the Hearing Board recommendation), but I assume they had some questions."

"This board is not only concerned with (Scroggins') past course of professional conduct but also that of his future practice of law," the Review Board wrote in a decision filed May 8. (See SCROGGINS, Page 2A) vin Owca said, noting that the company's security, fire, safety, and public relations departments participated.

"We donated use of the building because it's good community service. We perform in-house training on a consistent basis and we've done some joint-effort training before."

The goal of the disaster drill was to perform and manage needed tasks safely, effectively and efficiently, said Granite City Fire Chief Jerry Wallace, who coordinated the response.

Wallace commended his officers for their work during a critique held after the drill.

"The most important part of the operation is to have your personnel trained at the level you need them, and the purpose of this exercise was to simulate, as close as we could, a realistic situation. I think it was right on the money," Wallace said.

The participating agencies included the Granite City Fire Department, Police Department and ESDA, Illinois Emergency Management Agency, Granite City Auxiliary Police, State Fire Marshal's Office, Granite City Steel, Granite City Melvin Price Support Center Fire Department, Campbell's Ambulance, St. Elizabeth Medical Center, Anderson Hospital in Maryville, Illinois State Police Hazardous Materials Department and Amateur Radio Emergency Service.

"The teamwork between the organizations was good and the communications were excellent," said fire prevention inspector Butch Rister from the Office of the State Fire Marshal. Rister helped critique the drill.

"The organization was real good, step-by-step, and we had no problems or complaints," he said.

don't blame him for leaving, but he should not be rewarded. It's not fair to the citizens of this community."

Board member Debbie Wilkerson, who made the motion to accept Walmsley's resignation, said during the meeting that such earnings are paid to everyone who resigns or retires in the school district.

The board offers pay for earned, accumulated unused absences as a way of recognizing attendance and avoiding the cost of replacements, Walmsley said after the meeting. In rewarding employees for not taking sick leave days, the district encourages continuity of services, he added.

"I earned this by serving the district for 27 years, and the majority of the board accepted my desire to resign," Walmsley said.

He noted that unused-absence payments were given upon the resignations of Personnel Director Terry Saleem and Mitchell Principal Joan Harris when they left to accept other positions within the last two years.

Board member Jim Noeth abstained on the vote, saying after the meeting he did not have a strong feeling either way, and could see both sides of the issue.

Trial

cy room at St. Elizabeth Medical Center at 9:38 p.m.

Thornton testified that he and Brandon had quarreled and fought as children, relating incidents in which Brandon allegedly attacked him with a spray can and beat him up.

But the two had no such quarrels again until Nov. 9, 1990. Thornton testified that he went that day to Brandon's mother's home, where Brandon tried to hit him with a golf club. Thornton claims that within 15 or 20 minutes of that incident, Brandon tried to run him down in a car outside a tavern called The Place.

Thornton testified that, on the day before the shooting, his girlfriend told him that Brandon was looking for him.

"She said my cousin was looking for me and he was going to try to kill me," Thornton said. Thornton said he did not know why his cousin wanted to kill him but that he took the threat seriously.

Thornton said his cousin had a reputation for violence — a reputation attested to by other defense witnesses — which included a rape conviction.

While he testified that he had never seen Brandon with a gun, Thornton said he knew Brandon carried one because Brandon told him he did.

On the day of the shooting, Thornton said, he armed himself with a .25-caliber automatic handgun. But when he was confronted by Brandon that afternoon, Thornton said, he was unable to load the clip into it so he fled. Brandon pursued him in his truck, Thornton said.

After "hiding out for awhile," Thornton returned to the 1500 block of Second Street — where Brandon would later be shot — and got a ride home with friends.

At home, Thornton said, he obtained a .20-gauge sawed-off shotgun which he wrapped in a towel. After returning to Second Street, Thornton said, he placed the gun under the car hood, which was not latched. Brandon soon arrived and wanted to talk with Thornton, who refused.

"Then he said, 'If you don't want to talk, then let's dance,'" Thornton testified.

Thornton said he had to raise the hood on the car to retrieve the shotgun and, when Brandon got within five feet of him, Brandon appeared to reach for a weapon. Then, Thornton said, he shot Brandon.

Thornton gave these details to Public Defender John Rekowski but he was unable to recall information about the shotgun during cross-examination by Assistant State's Attorney Robert Trone.

Thornton responded to Trone's questions with "I don't remember, sir," on at least 12 occasions.

Scroggins

A seven-count complaint against Scroggins was initially filed with the ARDC Nov. 16, 1989. When Scroggins did not answer the allegations, an order was filed Jan. 29, 1990, holding that the charges were deemed admitted.

A report from the Hearing Board, filed March 9, 1990, found that each of the seven counts of the complaint presented the "same pattern of indifference, misconduct and neglect" on Scroggins' part.

The alleged infractions include: failure to file briefs on appeals for three different defendant-clients in criminal cases, even after the Appellate Court notified Scroggins that such failure subjected him to contempt proceedings; failure to transfer title to a parcel of real estate and an automobile for a client after agreeing to do so; failure to set a hearing date for an injured client after telling her he would do so; failure to represent a woman in a paternity suit after agreeing to do so and accepting a $400 retainer fee; and failure to represent a woman in a disability case after accepting a $100 retainer fee.

Scroggins filed exceptions to the Hearing Board's report, and argued that the alleged infractions were minor in nature, and that the recommended suspension is vindictive and without justification. But the Review Board found that Scroggins, in effect, admitted the allegations by his testimony and conduct at the hearing, and could prove no mitigating circumstances. Scroggins has 35 days to appeal the decision to the Illinois Supreme Court.

Local heating contractors battling IP over services

By Bonita Tillman
Staff writer

Local heating contractors are eagerly awaiting the outcome of a bill in the Illinois legislature that they feel will protect some of their services from Illinois Power Co.

Contractors in the region have formed a coalition called the Southern Illinois Alliance for Fair Competition to lead their battle. According to spokesman Jim Luge of Bel-O Sales and Services in Belleville, IPC is entering a world traditionally served by private contractors.

Because IPC has so much more name recognition, he said contractors feel the competition would not be given fair opportunities for service.

"The advantages of using utility bills for payment and having access to utility bill mailings for advertising purposes are examples of the uneven playing field that would result," Luge said.

However, George Wamser, regional manager for IPC, said his company is providing the same service it has for years. That service includes minor repairs on heating systems and lighting pilots.

"We're really doing what we have always done and we have no plans to do anything different," he said.

When a customer suffers a heating failure in the middle of the night, IPC will answer and either re-light the furnace or make a minor repair to get the service restarted, he said.

Even that service is at the customer's discretion, Wamser said. If the customer chooses to have someone else do the work, IPC will shut off the appliance or service to the entire house until the repair is made.

Illinois Power neither advertises for the service or accepts appointments for repair work, he added.

Wamser said he believes contractors are most concerned about a rumor that IPC has a Decatur warehouse full of appliances that the company intends to sell and install to its regular customers.

"That's just not true," he said. "I think they're concerned not about what we do, but what we might do. But we have no plans to sell and install appliances."

House Bill 3083, which would limit IPC's entry into other services such as the sale of white goods and heating and air conditioning systems and limit repairs to emergency service, has passed the Illinois Commerce Commission subcommittee and is in its second reading before the full House.

"The bill looks favorable, and we've got some support from an independent business group," Luge said. "About every contractor is upset about this."

Wamser said one service IPC has discussed, but not implemented, could actually help independent contractors.

The house inspection service is ideal for people buying or selling homes, but he said he doesn't know of anyone providing that service now.

"If and when we institute that in this area, they could benefit," Wamser said. "If we found a deficiency, the homeowner could contact a contractor for repairs."

IPC will continue to provide the same service it has for years, at least until the legislation either passes or fails, he added.

However, the utility company probably will re-evaluate its stance based on the outcome, Wamser said.

Weber in controversies Calls Harrison funding 'laundered'

Funding of state Supreme Court candidate Moses Harrison's primary campaign is under fire from former and present political opponents.

Republican Supreme Court candidate Don Weber alleges contributions by lawyers to Harrison, a Caseyville Democrat, were "laundered" through the Illinois Democratic Party.

And former Circuit Judge Carl Becker of Red Bud, one of Harrison's two unsuccessful opponents in the Democratic primary election March 17, agrees.

Weber said nearly $66,000 donated by lawyers to the state Democratic Party in March turned up later as in-kind contributions to Harrison.

"They're laundering this money through the state Democratic Party and (Belleville lawyer) Amiel Cueto is arranging it," Weber said.

He described Cueto as "the chief organizer and fund-raiser for Moses Harrison."

Cueto rejected the label. "I'm not associated with Harrison's campaign at all," he said.

Cueto and Weber have been political foes since 1981, when Weber, then Madison County state's attorney, prosecuted a client of Cueto's on rape charges.

State campaign disclosure records show that 16 lawyers and law firms in Madison and St. Clair counties contributed $65,750 to the Democratic Party in early March.

Records also show the party made $65,924 in in-kind contributions to Harrison's campaign March 9, eight days before the primary.

The contributions included postage and advertising for Becker and a third candidate, 5th District Appellate Court Judge Charles Chapman of rural Edwardsville, received no help from the party.

Chapman declined comment, but Becker, charged that donations were funneled through the state party to sidestep campaign disclosure laws.

"You can't tell me all the lawyers who are on that list aren't supporting Harrison," Becker said. "It's a fraud on the public is what it is. They bought the election. These fellows do this election after election, and no one does anything about it."

"This is what party organizations are for — to help and endorse candidates," he said. "Tell Mr. Weber that I will be watching closely to make sure that he does not take any assistance from local Republican organizations or the state Republican Party in his campaign for the Supreme Court."

Harrison, a 5th District Appellate Court judge, said he was puzzled by the money-laundering charge. "I have no knowledge of anything like that."

He said judges cannot solicit money and that he had had no role in fund-raising.

Dan White, director of the Chicago office of the State Board of Elections, said campaign disclosure laws were apparently not violated.

"As long as it's properly disclosed, it falls within the requirements of the campaign disclosure act," he said.

Weber said the fund-raising, if not illegal, causes an appearance of impropriety and violates the spirit of campaign disclosure laws.

State records list the following in-kind contributions from the party to Harrison's campaign March 9: $38,300 for postage; $5,100 for radio advertising; $6,990 for newspaper ads; $3,000 for signs; and $8,247 for other advertising.

Records show the Morris B. Chapman and Associates law firm of Granite City donated $15,000 to the Democratic Party March 3. Pratt, Jones, Tobin and Hylla, an East Alton law firm, contributed $5,000 March 3 and another $10,000 March 9.

Belleville lawyers making party donations March 3 were: Jack Carey, $2,500; Maurice E. Bone, $2,500; John M. English, $2,500; Edward F. Brennan Jr., $1,250; Grey Chatham, $5,000; Judy Cates, $1,250; Barry Dix, $2,500; Heiligenstein and Badgley, $2,500; John E. Norton and Associates, $750; Clyde L. Kuehn, $5,000; Pat Young, $2,500; Robert E. Becker, $2,500; and Michael J. Rengan, $2,500.

Records also show the Callis Law Firm of Granite City gave $2,500 to the party March 3.

Psychiatrist calls Weber fit for office

An area psychiatrist said judicial candidate Don Weber is fit for public office, despite his past deposition questioning Weber's mental health.

The deposition is the latest wrinkle in a decade-long feud between Weber, a Republican Illinois Supreme Court candidate from rural Edwardsville, and Belleville attorney Amiel Cueto.

Cueto recently produced the three-year-old deposition in which the psychiatrist described Weber as suffering from depression and being out of touch with reality.

Cueto said Monday that the deposition shows Weber is unfit to hold public office. "His psychiatrist says he's out of touch with reality and it's a permanent condition," Cueto said.

But the psychiatrist, Dr. Edwin Wolfgram, said Monday he thinks Weber "is fit to hold high public office." Wolfgram would not comment further.

Wolfgram's deposition came as part of being an expert witness for Weber in a libel action

tion to the suit. He said Wolfgram told him his response was not abnormal.

Weber said Cueto is trying to torpedo his campaign against Democrat Moses Harrison of Caseyville.

"I don't have a mental problem, I have a Cueto problem," Weber said. "You have to be partly crazy to run for public office with Cueto at large."

Weber and his wife Virginia sued Cueto, claiming they were libeled in 1983 in a letter written by Cueto and distributed to Madison County Board members, judges and the Illinois Attorney Registration and Disciplinary Commission. Weber was state's attorney at the time.

The letter included allegations that Weber and his wife lived together before they were married and that Weber paid a full-time salary for part-time work at the state's attorney's office and that they misused county money and encouraged a witness to commit perjury. The allegations were investigated but no action taken.

Weber said he was not and is not Wolfgram's patient. Weber said he was interviewed by Wolfgram on 10 occasions as Wolfgram prepared for the deposition, but was not treated.

Weber said Wolfgram "probably exaggerated" Weber's reaction to the suit. He said Wolfgram told him his response was not abnormal.

Say, we mean what we mean

"When I use a word it means precisely what I want it to mean. No more, no less."

So Humpty Dumpty told a horrified Alice during her sojourn through the looking glass. Alice, as would any rational human being, realized that if words have no meaning on their own, if the meaning of words is subject to change without notice, the only possible result is chaos.

The problem, Alice discovered, is that it was impossible to argue with Humpty Dumpty because Humpty simply changed the meaning of her words to suit his purpose.

So perhaps it is no surprise that, in the case of the Illinois Constitution, it appears the Humpty Dumptys have soundly defeated the Alices.

The members of the 1970 Constitutional Convention wanted to give the state a legal mandate to provide at least half of the funding for public education. So the members included a phrase calling for the state to provide the "majority" of the funding.

That wasn't good enough for the lawyers — the Humptys in this case — and the phrase was changed to having the "primary responsibility," which was said to mean the same thing, only better.

Now, 22 years later, "primary responsibility" appears to mean the state will provide about a third of the funding for public education.

Unhappy with this revised definition, legislators, many of whom were members of the constitutional convention, have now put a constitutional amendment on the November ballot that they hope will provide the originally intended mandate.

Does the amendment say "more than half" or "at least 51 percent"?

No, once again the Humptys have insisted on saying the same thing only better: The state will have the "preponderant responsibility" for funding public education.

To the voters, "preponderance" would seem to mean "more than half." But lawyers — our Humptys — already insist there is an "extremely wide gap" between the "preponderance of evidence" needed for a verdict of liability in a civil case and the "preponderance of evidence" needed for a conviction in a criminal case. Who knows what "preponderance" might mean in a couple of dozen years?

Ironically, Humpty Dumpty himself gives us the solution to this problem: "The question is who is to be master of whom, that is all."

If the voters say "preponderant responsibility" or even "primary responsibility" means "at least 51 percent," so be it. All the lawyers in the world armed with every conceivable dictionary and thesaurus shouldn't be able to change it to mean "about a third" or anything else.

And, in the future, it might be wise for the legislators to heed some advice from Mark Twain. By using 15 words when there were perfectly functional five- and 10-cent words available, Twain said, the U.S. Congress foolishly squanders enough money each session to cure most of the evils in America.

Privatizing school services

(The following is by Roderick Kelly for Copley News Service.)

As school boards struggle with burgeoning expenses, they are increasingly looking toward privatization as a panacea. Custodial, maintenance, security and other services are being contracted out to private firms.

The North Chicago School Board decided after lengthy discussions and hearings not to contract out its custodial and maintenance work. "We anticipated annual savings of $246,000 for the custodial work and $40,000 for the maintenance," said Martin McConahay, comptroller.

"Frankly, board members were very impressed with their surveys and on-site visits of the finalists, but the board ended up with a labor agreement with the current staffers," he said. It's a far cry from the $3.5 million that is being whacked from the next fiscal budget, which begins July 1, but the savings would have been a start.

"Most school boards, in their hearts, prefer hiring local people and keeping control in the district," said Glenn Smith, field representative for Federation of Teachers Lake County Local 804, Waukegan. "Because of the cost crunches, they have no choice but to look outside the district. Smith said, 'A lot of them go into it thinking they will get the same type of service they are accustomed to and they don't.'"

Glenbard School District 87, for example, contracted out one position, but three years later canceled the contract. "We contracted out the management part of the custodial work," said Ron Fraser, assistant superintendent of finance and administration.

"It's difficult at a high school district to contract out anything but custodial, because of regulations schools have," Fraser said. "But even custodial services require more than you think. You need custodians available at special events and extracurricular activities."

Some schools are open for community groups and churches to use. Others are open evenings and weekends for adult education. Then there are the usual uses for sports and extracurricular activities.

"It's not a 7 a.m. to 5 p.m. job. It's more 7 a.m. to 10 p.m., seven days a week," Fraser said.

North Chicago's support staff opted for a 5 percent pay cut to keep the custodial and maintenance operations in house. The district spends $1 million annually in salaries and benefits to 26 custodial employees serving nine elementary schools and one high school. It spends an additional $466,000 on 10 maintenance workers.

Two positions will be axed and the union conceded a higher medical deductible as part of the agreement.

The support staff in downstate Mascoutah is considering a 25 percent reduction in pay in a last-minute effort to match the bids of outside janitorial services.

Despite the lure of privatization, districts have found a downside. "We are finding a lot of indirect or hidden costs in having an outside food service," McConahay said. He cited maintaining equipment, upgrading electrical services and cleaning the kitchen. "If you had it in-house, they would be routine," he said.

Steve Kosco, financial officer for Carbondale District 165, agrees that quality and indirect costs are involved when outside services are employed. "We've changed custodial firms three times" since 1984-85, when the district first privatized services. The downside is "you don't have your own people. You are relying on a contractor and hopefully you get a good one."

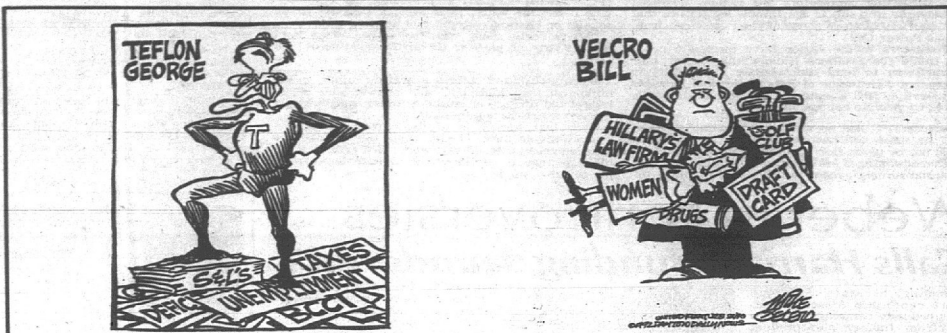

Carbondale set the stage for other districts by winning a landmark court decision on custodial workers laid off as a result of privatizing. "All I can say to others is that it's a very difficult transaction. When you think of making a change, get with an attorney. It's not as easy as you may think," Kosco said.

He said some districts constantly are at odds with contractors over quality of service. "You really have to keep your eyes open. Going outside for help is not necessarily a panacea," he said.

Besides the question of quality, Kosco said administrators spend time keeping tabs on the operations. "The bottom line has continued to benefit Carbondale."

"It was a major financial consideration when we first went outside," Kosco said. "It has saved us between $200,000 and $250,000 a year for eight years."

Competition keeps the savings coming. "We have only seen a $10,000 raise in prices since we've contracted. We have no trouble getting numerous bids to get our custodial work," Kosco said. "Food service is different. We've looked at privatizing food services, but there just isn't a lot of competition out there, so we use our own cooks," he said.

Senate rivals Braun, Williamson offer contrasts

(Written by Doug Finkle for Copley News Service.)

With apologies to Butch Cassidy, but who are these guys?

Illinois' next U.S. senator will be either Carol Moseley Braun or Rich Williamson, either of whom would finish far down on the list of the most-recognized people in the state.

But March's stunning primary election results have catapulted a county official and a private-practice lawyer into the national limelight.

Braun, 45, is the Cook County recorder of deeds, a post to which she was elected in 1987. To run for the county job, Braun left the General Assembly, where she was an assistant majority leader to House Speaker Michael Madigan, D-Chicago.

If a downstate politician quit a leadership post in the General Assembly for a backwater job like recorder of deeds, it would be considered the height of lunacy. But in the topsy-turvy world of Chicago politics, service in the Assembly is merely a training ground for bigger things, and a countywide office is not considered a step down.

Braun was elected to the Legislature in 1979 from a southside Chicago district that includes portions of the Hyde Park neighborhood.

More than 80 percent of the residents are African-American and many are middle-income wage-earners. More than a third of the district's residents are employed in professional or public administration jobs.

While Braun was in the General Assembly, Harold Washington was elected Chicago mayor. Braun and Washington were allies, and that relationship — along with support from the House black caucus — helped elevate Braun to a leadership position with Madigan.

In a Madigan-loyalty litmus test, Braun fell somewhere in the middle. She was neither a blind Madigan follower, nor was she among the handful of Democratic mavericks.

Acquaintances of Braun's from both parties describe her as articulate and very bright. She could hold her own in floor debates, they said, even when the arguments got heated.

Her politics were liberal — she often supported tax increases for social causes. But she could also work effectively with Republicans on some issues, such as her efforts in the mid-1980s on a bill to negotiate rates with hospitals that treat public-aid patients.

While Braun hasn't run for statewide office before, she does have extensive experience as a campaigner.

She has not been subjected to the kind of scrutiny that will be focused on her during the Senate race, but she has faced some of the fire that is directed at candidates for public office.

Williamson, on the other hand, has not run for any office before and has no experience with campaigning.

It's one of the reasons his campaign staff has already hired Arthur Finkelstein of New York to work with him. Finkelstein has polished the images of several Republican candidates.

"He's got to get used to being a candidate," said one associate. Williamson, 42, will not be mistaken for a great orator, but like Braun, he can articulate his thoughts. He also is described as very bright and a quick study on issues. At the same time, his lack of campaign experience shows.

In Springfield, Williamson was asked a question about "notch babies," a group of retirees who believe they do not receive their fair share of Social Security benefits.

The term is widely known, at least among people in public service, but Williamson did not appear familiar even with the phrase, let alone the issue. However, said one of his supporters, "you can bet he knows now."

For as far left as Braun is on the political scale, Williamson is on the right.

But that doesn't mean Williamson should be characterized as a hard-core conservative, say some associates. He's more pragmatic than that, they said. One person described him as "more the country-club Republican type."

That could be because of his upbringing. Williamson was born in Evansville and grew up in Winnetka, a wealthy Chicago suburb. He went to New Trier High School, which has one of the best academic reputations in the state.

He was an Eagle Scout and captain of his high school football and wrestling teams.

A graduate of Princeton, Williamson majored in religion at the Ivy League school. To this day, religion plays an important role in his life.

While outlining his pro-choice views on abortion, Williamson launched into a lengthy talk about how he discussed the issue extensively with his minister before arriving at his position. He said he frequently talks with his minister as a friend with a mutual interest in religion.

Despite his lack of electoral experience, Williamson has an extensive public service background. After graduating from the University of Virginia law school, he went to work with the powerful and GOP-connected Chicago law firm of Winston and Strawn.

He was working there when the Reagan administration called him to serve with the White House's senior staff.

As the man in charge of inter-governmental affairs, Williamson was responsible for Reagan's vision of transferring federal programs to the 50 states. Williamson still believes in the new federalism he helped launch.

Since leaving the White House in 1983, Williamson served as U.S. ambassador to the United Nations' offices in Austria and as a senior vice president at Beatrice Cos. Inc., a diversified company known mainly for its food products. He was in charge of corporate and international relations, among other duties.

Now a partner in the law firm of Mayer, Brown and Platt, Williamson has been a senior adviser to President George Bush's campaign and is on a presidential arms-control committee.

"He has a conservative life-style, but he's operated in the big world," said one associate.

Seeking photos of five mayors

TO THE EDITOR:

To the residents of Granite City: On March 4, 1986, Granite City was incorporated. Nineteen mayors have served this city since that time.

I have been told that pictures of these mayors hung on the walls of City Hall at one time. But what happened to these pictures after the Board Room was redecorated no one seems to know.

At the mayor's request, I have been spending a great amount of time the past year trying to find pictures of these men. I have located all but the following:

• James G. McRoberts, first mayor, was the first general superintendent of the American Steel Company. I have visited American Steel. They do not have Mr. McRoberts' picture.

• Mark Henson, second mayor, was married to the former Belle Wadsworth of Collinsville. He was a teacher at the Kinderhook School, superintendent of Madison County schools and president of the First National Bank. No pictures.

• John Edwards, fourth mayor, was born in Wales, settled in Indiana and came to Granite City in 1901. He was badly burned at the pump house during the flood of 1903 and died eight days later. His remains were taken to Indiana.

• George Kennedy, the eighth mayor, filled the unexpired term of Charles Uzzell in 1910.

• Arthur Jennings served as mayor in 1933-34 and later worked for the Press-Record.

In 1996, Granite City will celebrate its centennial.

Please help us locate these pictures so that they will be hanging on the walls of the City Hall, the Granite City Library and the Old Six Mile Museum for this very special occasion.

Quick response

TO THE EDITOR:

On April 4, I had just gotten out of bed and had a cardiac arrest.

My wife called the Granite City Firefighters here on Edgewood Avenue and they came in short order.

They took all the vital signs, made me comfortable and took me to St. Elizabeth Medical Center.

We want to thank these men who quickly responded to this call and to the staff at St. Elizabeth Medical Center for their immediate care.

Reading skills are essential

TO THE EDITOR:

Recently, I had the unique pleasure of sitting and reading with a sixth-grade class at Kreitner School. It was a chance for me to share with them my feelings about the importance of reading.

Children must learn how critical reading is to their education at an early age.

There are many adventures, new places and different worlds in books. I would also challenge parents to read with their children. Setting aside time daily for this important activity will help expand their child's mind, and teach them the importance of reading.

A child that is interested in reading will likely grow up to be an adult who enjoys reading. And devoting time to become a good reader at an early age will help advance a child's education success.

Last year, I co-sponsored a resolution calling for a National Literacy Day. I will continue to work in Washington to support programs to help teach reading skills to our nation's children.

However, I would also challenge parents to read with their children. Setting aside time daily for this important activity will help expand their child's mind, and teach them the importance of reading.

Cereal boxes frame the work of local artist

By Ann-Marie Campos
Correspondent

Terry Ravanelli sits in his home office in the far corner of his basement.

The room, just large enough for the bare necessities, isn't your usual office.

Instead of containing a computer, rolodex and special reports, it has a drawing board, an enlarger and a wide variety of water colors.

The walls are filled with artwork, such as a caricature of Elvis Presley, a horse racing scene and cartoons — lots of cartoons. Each is the result of either Ravanelli's free-lancing or full-time assignments as senior artist at Maritz Inc. in St. Louis.

"My favorite pieces are cartoons," the 34-year-old artist said. He pulled out one of his latest pieces of work, an animated squirrel that has a resemblance to a cuddly Disney character.

The cartoon, a free-lance project, will be printed on a children's brand cereal that's sold in the southern states.

"I like to draw animals and objects, to bring them to life and make them fun," he said.

"When a client is using a cartoon, you know it's geared to being fun."

"Cartoons don't need any reference. They just come right out of here," he said, pointing to his head.

You don't have to travel to Florida or St. Louis to catch a glimpse of Ravanelli's work. Some of his creations can be found right here in Granite City.

Just go to a local grocery store and pick up a box of Raisin Bran cereal. The lanky baseball players and boldly colored audience are Ravanelli's creation, too.

Or check out the pencil-sketched portraits of sports celebrities, such as professional tennis player Jimmy Connors and the late professional boxer Joe Louis, that decorate the walls of Ravanelli's Restaurant, owned by his father, Frank Ravanelli. Terry drew the portraits when he was a teen-ager working in the restaurant.

"I always thought I'd just work for my dad in the restaurant," he said.

So, when Ravanelli decided to take some art classes at Southern Illinois University at Edwardsville, it was purely for fun.

Ravanelli had a natural touch that didn't go unnoticed. His art instructor saw his talent and persuaded him to seek a career in commercial art, which meant transferring schools.

Ravanelli went on to Florissant Valley Community College and graduated in 1978. Within one year, he landed a job with Maritz.

"I always liked to draw, but I still had to feel my way through the business. You have to get out and meet people in the business."

After 13 years, Ravanelli knows the key is client satisfaction.

"A lot of artists have to go through a lot with the writers and product managers," he said. "With my certain style, my certain niche, I can create what they want. So, little changes are made."

But even the smallest changes, such as colors, positioning and paper quality, can have major effects.

"I'll do my best to persuade them (the clients), but they're paying for it. You have to satisfy them," he said.

Meeting clients' expectations also means meeting their deadlines, which are usually one week.

For Ravanelli, who works full time by day and free-lances by night, deadlines can be especially hectic.

After working all day, he likes to spend time with his wife and three children, which means he finds himself juggling family life and free-lance assignments. In fact, he does most of his free-lancing at night after the rest of his family is tucked in bed, or in the early hours before the house is bustling with morning routines.

Ravanelli usually doesn't have any trouble meeting his deadlines, but he knows life's unexpected obstacles are factors that can't be accounted for.

"You can never change a deadline," Ravanelli said. "When something happens, you've still got to get the job done."

Ravanelli spoke from experience. He was thinking of his first "big money-paying job," the Budweiser Comedy Tour, for which he drew caricatures of the comedians.

Ravanelli put many hours of creativity and sweat into the project. As his one-week deadline approached, he found himself working harder than ever to obtain near-perfect images of Roseanne Barr, Richard Anderson and George Carlin, to name a few.

On the Saturday before his Monday morning deadline, Ravanelli worked around-the-clock. Exhausted, he decided to catch some sleep before adding the finishing touches.

"I walked into my work room on Sunday to finish up and there was Andy, my oldest son, who was then two. He had crawled up to the drawing board and was drawing all over it with his Crayolas."

Ravanelli said. He made large circular motions as if reliving the dreadful moment.

"It was like the classic, 'My dog ate my homework,'" Ravanelli said. "I had to call and tell them what happened."

Ravanelli worked feverishly, and within two days the project was complete.

"Now I never leave anything out," he said and laughed.

The same dedication that pulled him through the Budweiser project is the same diligence that's kept his career advancing.

"My style is what I like to do," Ravanelli said. "Being versatile is the reason I've been successful."

YOUTH FOCUS: "If I could accomplish one thing, what would it be?"

(Asked of students at Venice High School, Granite City Senior High School and Madison Senior High School.)

By Pam Doepke-Hurd

Maggie Silva, Madison

"If I could accomplish one thing it would be to stop the violence between the races. The violence between the nationality of a person, where the person comes from, or the color of a person's skin is unnecessary. You must look at a person from the inside not from the outside."

Mike Kalips, Granite City

"To be a college graduate."

Felecia Watts, Venice

"My goal would be to finish school first of all and to go to college and finish with a degree in nursing, then to become a registered nurse."

Ettirick Lucas, Madison

"If there was one thing that I would like to accomplish it is to help in making the world a better place to live by helping homeless people, sick babies, and improving all of the less fortunate people. This is important to me because the earth is all we have, besides hope, to call our own. We must work together to help our world."

Nicole Holloway, Venice

"If I could accomplish one thing out of life, I would like to see myself make it twelve years in medical school."

Sarah Biller, Granite City

"To make it through college and be a teacher."

Marcus Franklin, Venice

"The one thing I would like to accomplish would be to become a professional basketball player. That has been my dream for many years. I would also like a lot of money doing so."

John Green, Granite City

"To find a cure for cancer."

April Harris, Venice

"If I could accomplish one thing, I would like to be known as a respectable black American citizen. This title would be a benefit not only to myself, but also to my family and my country."

"One thing I will accomplish if I could is to feed the children who are poor. I feel that no kid should go to bed hungry, without food or fresh water. It's not right for a parent to have kids and not be able to feed them."

Shawnte Owens, Madison

"One thing I would like to accomplish is a good education. I think education is the key thing next to discipline because first you need discipline to get a good education. I would like to finish school, get a four-year college scholarship and get a good paying job."

Brandy Conner, Madison

"If I had one thing that I could accomplish it would be going through high school and college because in today's world you need all the classes and degrees you can get."

Family role cited in abuse fight

The Granite City Drug and Alcohol Task Force has conducted nine-hour citizens' impact training of task force members in the areas of substance abuse and community efforts.

Bill Terrell, chairman of the Task Force, said the training included presentations by prevention professionals from Plasa Health Care and the Edgewood Program.

The training also included a brainstorming session and needs assessment on primary concerns in addressing substance abuse issues in Granite City.

The Task Force formulated the following statement of purpose: "The purpose of the Granite City Drug and Alcohol Task Force is to educate, lead and empower our community to become strengthened in our family lives in order that we may promote a community free of the destructive effects of alcohol and other drugs."

The Task Force also prepared a list of goals it wants to focus on in the coming months in order to impact Granite City.

Task Force members attending the training were: Terrell, Vice Chairman Diann Toler, the Rev. Ralph Totten, George Smith, Linda Reish, Mary Jesse, Liz Briggs, Delores Vogeler, Ron Streiler, Joanne Terrell, Cindy Gavilsky, Paula Hubbard, the Rev. Phil Simcoak, Sandy Crites, Tom Candler, Dan Duncan, Jill Heuchert and Jean Schram.

The public is invited to attend the meetings of the Task Force, scheduled at 11 a.m. on the first Wednesday of each month at Shoney's Restaurant.

State camping fees increase

Camping fees at state parks and historic sites increased on May 11. Conservation Director Brent Manning and Historic Preservation Agency Director Susan Mogerman announced Tuesday.

"The fees are being increased to help offset the expected budget reductions in the next fiscal year," Manning said. "In some cases, the increase will mean Department of Conservation camping sites which were slated for closure will open."

Beginning May 11, daily camping fees will increase as follows:

Class A (showers and electricity) $7 to $8; Class B (electricity only) $6 to $7; Class C (showers only) $6 to $8; Class D (vehicular access) $4 to $7; Class E (tent or primitive) $3 to $6; adult group $2 to $3 per person; youth group $1.50 to $1 per person. To reserve a campsite the fee will increase from $3 to $5.

In addition, the daily utility charged at Class A and Class B sites with electricity will increase from $2 to $3. For example, the cost to camp at a Class A site would be $11 ($8 plus a $3 utility fee).

Only two historic sites have camping and are affected by the change: Lincoln's New Salem near Petersburg and Fort Kaskaskia near Ellis Grove.

In addition, a $1 per person activity fee will be charged to all beach users at seven state parks, including Lake Le-Aqua-Na, Rock Cut, Moraine View, Clinton Lake, Wolf Creek, Sam Dale and Stephen Forbes.

The Department of Conservation also intends to reopen five areas previously slated for closure.

Apple River Canyon State Park, Oglesby County — the campground will remain open.

Lowden Memorial State Park, Oglesby County — the campground will reopen as soon as a temporary staff person can be hired. No specific reopening date has been set.

Prophetstown State Park, Whiteside County — the campground was reopened Friday, May 8.

Saline County Conservation Area, Saline County — the campground will reopen as soon as a temporary staff person can be hired. No specific reopening date has been set.

Splitter Woods State Natural Park, Macon County — the site will officially open May 15, but Lincoln Trail Homestead State Park will remain closed as will the enclosed shelter.

Spiritual battle to end war

The public is invited to join in spiritual battle to end physical war at 11:15 a.m. on Saturday, May 16, at St. Elizabeth Church in Granite City; the location is at the corner of Pontoon and Johnson Road.

War is raging in what was formerly Yugoslavia; thousands have died in the civil war in Bosnia-Herzegovina. Now in Medjugorje, St. James church, the site of apparitions since June 24, 1981, is surrounded by warfare.

For safety reasons the pilgrimages that brought millions of faithful to witness six children as they prayed with Mary have nearly stopped, although the messages still continue at 6:40 p.m. Medjugorje time.

A special mass will begin at 11:15 a.m. so special prayers of consecration for the love of Jesus and of Mary, his earthly mother, can be said in communion with prayer groups around the world at 11:40 a.m. Central time.

The faithful are asked to participate in prayer to help change the world immediately for our time, the future.

The mass will include gospel readings as well as songs of praise to God. A special reception will follow. Area pilgrims who have visited Medjugorje are specially encouraged to attend.

For information/directions to the mass call Mark Yehling: (618) 931-7206 or Father Bud Degrand (618) 931-2916.

Deacons meeting held

The April Deacons meeting of the First Presbyterian Church at 22nd and Delmar was held on April 8.

The meeting was chaired by Barbara Landis, with the opening prayer given by Dr. Lewis Trotter, pastor.

Jim Heaton, chairman of the Evangelism and Outreach Committee, is going to purchase direction signs for the church. This will enable the community to locate the church easier. Tom Earls is in the process of purchasing new shirts for the church softball team.

Betty Schmedake, chairman of the Fellowship and Care Committee, asked the Deacons to pick up the Easter gifts to be delivered to the shut-ins.

Service Committee chairman Zig Konieczny stated his committee is working hard and everything is doing fine.

Dr. Lewis Trotter made a special announcement, designating May 24 as Heritage Sunday. The church members who have been members for 50 years or more will be honored. This will be a very special service. There will be a reception following the 10 a.m. service on May 24 honoring those members.

Trotter gave the closing prayer.

Honor society inducts Branding

Stephen Branding has been inducted into the RHO CHI Society at the St. Louis College of Pharmacy.

The Initiation Banquet was held on April 4 at the College Student Center in the Glaser Room.

The honor society in higher education in America has its roots in the early development of colleges and universities. The first of them, Phi Beta Kappa, was established in 1776.

With the expansion of higher education, Phi Beta Kappa chose to limit its membership to students in colleges of liberal arts and sciences. Other honor societies came into existence to fill the void in other academic disciplines.

Rho Chi Society was established as "the Honor Society of Pharmacy" in 1922. The Beta Kappa Chapter of Rho Chi was chartered at the St. Louis College on May 25, 1955.

The fundamental objective of

Branding

Rho Chi has always been to promote the advancement of the pharmaceutical sciences through the encouragement and recognition of Sound Scholarship.

He is presently completing the fourth year of pharmacy and he is an active participant in the International Soccer Program and the school's Choral Program. He is the son of Richard and June Branding.

from water. It was never put in front of us as a hazardous waste facility."

Brown said he had received information from Alan Orbitalis, city economic development director, that an average of 45 trucks per day could be going into the proposed plant. Byron Bradd, general manager of Eticam's Fernley, Nev., plant, had been quoted as saying there would be an average of 12 trucks per week or even less than that.

The vote taken in December 1989 was discussed Tuesday night.

George Moran, a retired appellate judge, said there was supposed to be a public meeting on the proposal, but there were two problems. Moran said there were no residents at the meeting, and the published announcement of the meeting was not signed.

Moran said an unsigned announcement does not have any legal impact.

Another legal issue that might be pursued by SPILL involves the siting process. Andria said the group is looking into whether residents living close to the proposed site were properly notified about the site.

"We're not leaving anything untended," Andria said. "The citizens' group plans to look at the lack of notification and at the fundamental fairness of the whole thing. If there's something there, we'll file a complaint with the Pollution Control Board."

Some described an Illinois Environmental Protection Agency public hearing May 26 as opponents' last stand to blocking Eticam from coming to Granite City. But Andria said she still has more options to exercise before that date arrives. She wouldn't elaborate on what they might be.

"There are some technical things we'll bring up the evening," she said. "Some of them, we haven't told the public about. They're (the city officials) not telling all their cards and we're not going to tell ours yet."

"We're going to see this through until the end. Our view is that the end will mean 'plant.'"

Addams Family

Lots of laughs and an outstanding cast make this movie version of "The Addams Family" darkly funny and laughable. However, the film does have grave overtones. Starring Angelica Huston, Raul Julia and Christopher Lloyd. () Rated PG-13 (playful violence). Running time: 101 minutes. 66 Park In

The Babe

John Goodman gives the performance of his young career as Babe Ruth. A reasonably authentic treatment of Ruth's experiences, but John Fusco's script has a soft ending. "The Babe" recreates the places and times of Ruth's life with great accuracy and color. ()

Rated PG (dugout language and stories, and inferences of adult sexual conduct). Running time: 120 minutes. Clarkson, Des Peres, Eureka, Halls Ferry, Kenrick, Mid Rivers, Ronnie's, St. Charles, Union Station, St. Clair, Northwest Square, Esquire, Nameoki.

Basic Instinct

Michael Douglas and Sharon Stone are a steamy couple in this well-written, adult murder mystery set in San Francisco. Lots of sex, violence and action. A movie that will keep you guessing about who the real murderer really is. ()

Rated R (explicit nudity and scenes of sexual intercourse). Running time: 123 minutes. Clarkson, Des Peres, Eureka, Halls Ferry, Kenrick, Mid Rivers, Ronnie's, St. Charles, Union Station, St. Clair, Northwest Square, Esquire, Eastgate.

Beethoven

An updated kitchen comedy about a St. Bernard and the family he protects on all fronts. Enjoyable family fare for a weekend matinee. ()

Rated PG (mild use of adult language). Running time: 119 minutes. Alton, Clarkson, Des Peres, Eureka, Halls Ferry, Kenrick, Mid Rivers, Northwest Plaza, Rowley, Union Station, St. Clair, Regency, Galleria, Westroads.

Beauty and the Beast

A triumph of animated storytelling. Based on the French fairy tale of the same title, this beautiful, musical triumph features an outstanding cast of vocal talents led by Robby Benson as the voice of the Beast. Don't miss it. (*)

Gary Sinise plays "Mother" Wilkins in "A Midnight Clear," the story of an American infantry squad's traumatic experiences on the front lines of the European theater near the end of World War II.

Rated G. Running time: 84 minutes. Halls Ferry, Keller, St. Charles, Quad, Kirkwood.

Bugsy

Warren Beatty appears as the late mobster Bugsy Siegel in what may be Beatty's finest work in a film. Barry Levinson directs this sumptuous and biographically truthful period piece. (*)

Rated R (violence, language, sexual suggestiveness). Running time: 135 minutes. Creve Coeur, Lindbergh, Village, Cross Keys, St. Andrews.

City of Joy

Patrick Swayze plays a disillusioned physician from Houston who flies off to India to find himself. What he discovers is a way to happiness through helping other people. A good film from director Roland Joffe. (*)

Rated PG-13 (some violence and vivid depiction of leprosy and squalid living conditions). Running time: 135 minutes. Chesterfield, Des Peres, Halls Ferry, Ronnie's, St. Charles, St. Clair, Northwest Square, Eastgate, Esquire.

Cross Cross

Not reviewed. Clarkson, Halls Ferry, Northwest Plaza, Ronnie's, Union Station, St. Clair, Regency.

Esquire.

Cutting Edge

A boring exercise in goofy movie-making about an ex-Olympic hockey star who, after an injury, becomes an Olympic competitor again, this time as a figure-skating partner to a bratty prima donna. It skates, but it doesn't fly. ()

Rated PG (language). Running time: 104 minutes. Eureka, Mid Rivers, St. Charles, Eastgate.

Deep Cover

Well-acted police thriller about vice, violence and all the many other seamy elements of a drug kingpin's existence. Larry Fishburne and Jeff Goldblum headline. (*)

Rated R (violence, profane language and sexual content). Running time: 112 minutes. Halls Ferry, Northwest Plaza, St. Charles, Union Station, St. Clair.

FernGully

An exciting new animated film about the ecology and some mythical folks who live in a magical place called "FernGully." Ideal family fun. Robin Williams is a stitch playing a happily demented bat. A great time. (*)

Rated G. Running time: 72 minutes. Clarkson, Eureka, Jamestown, Kenrick, Mid Rivers, Ronnie's, St. Charles, St. Clair, Northwest Square, Galleria, Westroads, Eastgate.

Final Analysis

A latter-day exercise in homage to Alfred Hitchcock and "Vertigo." Richard Gere is a shrink and Kim Basinger the sister of one of his patients. Hot romance, predictable plot, strong story focus. (*)

Rated R (nudity, love-making scene and adult language). Running time: 124 minutes. Lindbergh, Village, Ritz.

Folks

A lame, bad taste comedy starring Tom Selleck as a Chicago stock trader trying to help his parents in their time of need. Skip it. ()

PG-13 (language and some amorous scenes). Running time: 108 minutes. Clarkson, Eureka, Jamestown, Keller, Mid Rivers, Northwest Plaza, Union Station, St. Clair, Regency, Crestwood, Esquire, Westroads, Eastgate.

Fried Green Tomatoes

An excellent ensemble cast weaves a colorful, heartfelt story of days past in the South and how the memories of friendship can spawn a better day in the present. Superior and inspiring entertainment. (*)

Rated PG-13 (language and mild violence). Running time: 100 minutes. Northwest Plaza.

Lawnmower Man

A film adaptation of one of Stephen King's lesser short stories about a retarded man who turns violent when a secret serum develops his ego to unmanageable proportions.

Rated R (sexual content, violence and vulgar language). Running time: 108 minutes. Lindbergh.

the whole time."

In addition to all his offensive accomplishments (a career on-base percentage just below .500), Tim continued to play outstanding defense in the outfield. He is the only Cougar not to be charged with an error this year and led the outfielders with four assists.

Twin brother Jamie bounced back solidly from a .218 batting average in 1991. After sitting out the first eight games this year, the slick-fielding shortstop is hitting .374 with two home runs, 33 RBIs, seven doubles, six triples and 23 stolen bases. He has made 14 errors, but also leads the Cougars with 125 assists. He had three hits, including a tie-breaking three-run triple in the sixth inning of Saturday's 11-3 win over Lewis University at Roy Lee Field.

"We've seen some pretty good shortstops in Division II, but I don't know if there's one better than Jamie," said Tim. "The big thing he has going for him this year is a better attitude. We had some guys last year who weren't as serious about baseball as they should have been, and that had an effect on Jamie. But it's been a lot better this year. I think he has a better chance of being drafted than I do, and he says he'll sign if he gets picked."

Moad, a 1988 graduate of GCHS who played two years at Lewis and Clark Community College, got things going about the time the team did this year. The Cougars were 8-0-1 before winning 28 of their last 36 to finish the regular season 36-18-1. Moad was batting .157 at one point after going through an 0-for-27 skid.

He got the average back up to .287 with two home runs, 43 RBIs and 21 doubles. That's only three short of the school-record 24 doubles he rapped out in 1991 when he was an All-Region player, batting .406 (fourth best ever at SIUE).

"There's no telling how many doubles I would have had if I had had a good year," said Moad. "The first few games I was hitting balls right at people, and it just turned into one of those things."

Moad turned to Granite City hitting guru Jim Greenwald for help. A couple days in the batting cages with him helped tremendously.

"He built my confidence up and got me more aggressive," said Moad. "My confidence was real low. I had my doubts about getting my average anywhere near .300."

time.

"It was an honor and really a surprise," Wallace said of the conference recognition. "I was the first guy on our team to get that, and we have a lot of real good players. I didn't even know about it until one of our pitchers said he had seen it in the paper."

Wallace said he might have been "overcoached" for the first part of his college career.

"They had me lowering my hands and shortening my stride," he said. "At the meeting where they told me I was going to be the regular catcher, they said I should basically go back to what I had done before. I guess I'm back to doing most of the things I did in high school."

"Joe was handling every at-bat like it was do or die," said Ward. "He just had to quit pressing. He has provided us with a little power at the bottom of the order" (Wallace usually hits seventh).

Wallace might not be back to where he was in 1990, when he hit .492 with 10 home runs in a 25-game senior season with the

Brewer to play golf at Lincoln College

Joe Brewer of Granite City has signed a national letter of intent to play golf for Lincoln (Ill.) College.

Brewer, who advanced to sectional competition for GCHS golf coach Russ Chappell's team last fall, will join a team which finished 1991 as the Region XXIV champions with an 89-13 record. The Lynx are ranked 14th in the National Junior College Association of America poll.

Lincoln will compete in the national tournament June 9-12 in Scottsdale, Ariz.

"Signing a young man like Joe who is really coming into his own as a golfer will be a big addition to our program," said Lincoln coach Mike Riley.

Summer junior clinic at The Legacy again

The Legacy golf course is taking registration for the second annual junior clinic. It's a six-week program which includes interaction and course etiquette. The clinic starts June 11 and runs through July 16. Boys and girls ages 10-14 are invited.

The Granite City Optimist Club will be holding the Junior World of Golf tournament at The Legacy on May 30 at 10 a.m. The tournament is open to boys and girls ages 10-17. For more information, call The Legacy at 931-4653.

MAC girls softball starts

All girls born in 1981 or 1982 interested in playing softball for the Mitchell Athletic Club should call Jim Greer at 797-1208.

Warriors. But the pitching is just a tad better at the Division I level.

"I crossed my mind that maybe I couldn't handle the pitching," he said. "I wasn't seeing the ball too well and I was just happy to hit one in fair territory."

After the conference tournament comes regional competition for OSU, which has been in the Top 20 all year. Regional winners advance to the College World Series in Omaha, Neb., something Wallace and his teammates missed out on last spring.

times on pitches in the dirt," said Stegemeier. "Last week we were hitting the breaking ball. This week we've changed. (Jason) Maxfield and Hildreth are still swinging the bats pretty well."

Sigman struck out every Warrior at least once, and he got cleanup hitter Jeff Luffman three times.

"Sigman is very good," said Stegemeier. "But we've seen other pitchers who were pretty close to him and we've hit them."

Jeff Ridenour (1-1) was the losing pitcher in the nightcap, with Tom Buss getting the win in relief for West. The Warriors led 2-1, but the Maroons took the lead and then got two insurance runs in the seventh.

Joe Rieser (6-1) is scheduled to start today's 4:15 p.m. game in East St. Louis.

Walgreen's is now open 24 hours here

Walgreen's now offers 24-hour service at its store at 3801 Nameoki Road, Granite City. This is Walgreen's first 24-hour store in this area.

"Both our pharmacy and our store are open around-the-clock as an added convenience for customers," said manager Dale Malinckrodt.

"We're here to help you if your child becomes ill in the middle of the night, if you need an emergency prescription at 2 a.m., or if it's simply more convenient to shop later in the evening."

In all Walgreen pharmacies, the "Intercom" computer keeps customer records and helps the pharmacist prepare prescriptions.

By saving time and eliminating many routine tasks, Intercom can enable Walgreen pharmacists to spend more time answering questions and explaining drugs," Malinckrodt said.

"Because of Intercom, your prescription records are available in any Walgreen's you visit," he explained. "We also provide special services, such as print-outs of Walgreen's prescription purchases for tax and insurance records."

Glik's opens new store in St. Charles

Glik Stores, a 95-year-old Granite City-based company operating 34 stores in Missouri and Illinois, opened a 310 and Less and a Glik's store in Regency Plaza, St. Charles, on April 9.

"I feel very pleased to join the staff at St. Elizabeth Medical Center," Dr. Hemmer said. "I will be providing consultation and plastic surgery services as a staff member."

Health-care field is where the jobs are — and will be

By Roger McGrath
Correspondent

Good news: Teenagers apparently do listen. The evidence: They've gotten the message that many of tomorrow's jobs will be in health care.

"I'm seeing a larger percentage of students looking at health fields," said Carolyn Peterson, a counselor at St. Charles West High School.

The same is true at O'Fallon (Ill.) Township High School, said counselor Bruce Elser.

"I think they've heard from their peers and from their parents that nurses (and related occupations) are in demand," Elser says.

Adults also are getting the message. The Special School District of St. Louis County, after announcing it would start a licensed practical nurse program in the fall, was flooded with nearly 200 telephone calls, said Dan Ehlkenbeck, assistant superintendent of applied technologies services.

Indeed, health-care jobs constitute one-half of the 30 occupations with the best growth prospects through 2005, according to the U.S. Bureau of Labor Statistics.

In the past, the bureau's biennial projections of the economy's future employment needs "have been fairly accurate," said John Lukasiewicz, a bureau economist.

The most recent projection, covering the 1990-2005 time span, contains bad news for manufacturing but a rosy outlook for the services sector.

Even under the most optimistic projection (the economy growing at a 2.5 percent annual clip), manufacturers will add just 100,000 jobs by 2005. More likely, manufacturers will eliminate 600,000 to 2.4 million positions.

Service jobs will account for 23 million of the 23.3 million new jobs created under the moderate-growth (annual 2.3 percent economic growth) scenario. The ranks of the self-employed will swell by 1.8 million by 2005, while the goods-producing sector — mining, manufacturing and construction, America's industrial base — will add just 300,000 jobs.

The biggest gain will be the 11.5 million jobs created in health care and business services (temporary-help agencies, advertising and public relations agencies, etc.) categories.

The fastest growing health-care occupations include home health aides, physical therapists, radiological technicians, medical secretaries, psychologists, surgical technicians, registered nurses and licensed practical nurses.

Other fast-growth occupations include paralegals, travel agents, corrections officers, computer programmers and data processing equipment repairmen. A chilling prediction is that the number of lawyers is expected to jump 35 percent to 793,000 by 2005, from 587,000 in 1990.

Teenagers, which make up tomorrow's workforce, should begin exploring career options their sophomore year, Peterson said. For a youngster who likes to draw, potential occupations could include an architect, engineer, graphic artist or cartoonist. That list can be whittled down by enrolling in a variety of drawing-related classes, she said.

Students pursuing nursing, physical therapy or other in-demand jobs don't have that luxury. They often find they're shut out of advanced programs.

"The competition to get into those classes is very keen," Peterson said, noting that one local college's nursing program is already booked through 1995.

"So a student needs to know early on to get a chance to get in those fields."

Graduating from high school, a junior college or four-year college is no guarantee of continued employment, experts say.

"Nowadays, you don't just want to prepare yourself for a job out of school," said Russell Signorino, labor analyst for the Missouri Division of Employment Security. "You need to lay a foundation for future careers, which will number three to six over a lifetime."

The current recession — in which unemployment touched friends, neighbors, relatives and parents — has helped hammer home the point that no job or career is forever, Elser said.
